Designated Adoptions Program C

Frequently, adoptive families find their own prospective birth mother or relinquishing family through friends, church or acquaintances. Such prospective adoptive parents have formed a relationship without the assistance of an agency. There are three possibilities:

1. A Colorado birth mother and a Colorado family have a relationship with each other with the intent of completing an adoption.
2. The birth mother lives in Colorado and the family lives in another state.
3. The prospective adoptive family lives in Colorado and the birth mother is out of state.

All about Adoption Services will assist in the process with all of the Colorado requirements while working with any agency across the nation to complete the adoption.
